Dear Miss Gordon:

I would much appreciate your assistance in suggesting how I may determine and where I may check to confirm or discount the family legend of descent from Loyalist forebearers. The story, as given in the Kingston Whig-Standard on Saturday, December 10, 1949, in a brief item about some collateral descendants, is that one SAMUEL RYDER (ca. 1755 -1817), a surveyor, was granted lands near present-day Kingston -lands that were later to become Cataragui Cemetery. His son John (1775 - Feb. 15, 1832) of Pittsburgh (Township %) is buried there. Other details are given in the story but are simply erroneous. This puts the above information in serious doubt as well. A third-hand statement in the book Kingston Before the War of 1812. The Champlain Society (Toronto 1959) mentions the "Riders" and a following footnote says that Samuel Ryder was buried in the family plot which was later absorbed by Cataragui Cemetery. None of the other limited printed materials available to me here in Victoria have led anywhere.

Where can I seek further information? Any help or suggestions you can offer would be greatly appreciated.

Yours truly

signed

FIVE GENERATIONS, descendants of a United Empire Loyalist family which settled in Kingston, all but one residents of Kingston, are pictured above. Standing are, left to right, Mrs. Cecil Climo, Niagara Falls, and her mother, Mrs. Robert Bruce, 420 Albert street. Seated at left is Mrs. Seldon Newman, 218 Victoria street, Mrs. Climo's daughter. At right, seated, is Mrs. James Maxwell, 55 Beverley street, mother of Mrs. Bruce, and great-great-grandmother of the baby, Wendy Newman, whom she is holding. Mrs. Maxwell is 92 and little Wendy is eight months old. Mrs. Maxwell and Mrs. Bruce have lived here all their lives. Mrs. Climo was a Kingstonian until her marriage, and her daughter, Mrs. Newman, became a Kingstonian by marriage. Eight generations back, baby Wendy's great-great-great-great-great-grandfather, Samuel Ryder, a land surveyor, was granted the land which is now Cataraqui Cemetery and an office in the little town of Kingston following the American Revolution. A prosperous New Englander, who had come originally from England, he had given up lands on the Black River where Watertown, NY, now stands, by remaining true to England, though he knew George Washington, a fellow surveyor and had travelled to America with him. He died here in 1817. His son, John Ryder, was also a surveyor, working in Pittsburg Township, Prince Edward County, Madoc and Marmora. He made the first survey of Bath. John Ryder died in 1832 at the age of 57 from pneumonia contracted from walking in moccasins on the ice from Wolfe Island where he was surveying, to Kingston. He is buried in the family plot in Cataraqui Cemetery which was retained when the family sold the land which they had cleared. Dec. 10, 1949
